

Brainstorming

1. Something to do with music. Sell your old records? Local shows? Promote local music?
2. App that can appraise the value of vinyls? App to promote local gigs? List of local acts and map that can find local shows?
3. Let's do an app to promote local music. I think this would be the most fun to work on and also do a lot for community and local artists trying to make their way
4. This idea has technically existed before, but it was just part of other sites, such as facebook. People use social media to promote local music, and things like ticketmaster find shows near you, but not often small local ones. This is an app fully dedicated to promoting local artists and providing them with a platform
5. This would be useful in the industries of art, advertising, and entertainment

Product Proposal

1. My idea is an app that promotes local artists and finds local gigs and events near wherever the user is. Venues and artists can register events to be shown on the app, and artists and venues can post ads, flyers, and promotional material
2. I'm part of a couple bands, so I know how hard it is to get gigs and to promote yourself. I think an app like this dedicated to local artists and venues would be very helpful.
3. Being a local artist can be a struggle. Finding gigs is difficult, promoting yourself on social media only gets you so far, and reaching a decent-sized audience . With an app like this, local artists would have a dedicated promotional platform to help their careers
4. This would be a social media/ticket app that essentially combines instagram/facebook with ticketmaster.
5. I guess it serves the user's needs. When the user wants to find local shows and artists, this app finds them.
6. I suppose artists or venues could pay for priority listings on the app
7. Yes it's very simple to describe
8. The users would just be anyone interested in local artists and events, so I think it would be a somewhat large market
9. I don't think there's a secret sauce for my product (I don't know what that means)